THE OLD YEAR.

The glad old year with all 10 joys Illds us farewell to-night : and leaves us naught but memory dear, And passes from our sight. ovether in this dear old year, No more bright days we'll spend :

But we know not how it will end. How have we spent those bullowed days The twelve bright months that've flown, Those days forever gone

Of the wanderer for bread; or have we turned idm from our door, With bitter scorn instead. Have we been thoughtless or unkind t'nto our friends so dear, Helped them their bardens bear.

And may we not have left undone

Have we bearkened to the call.

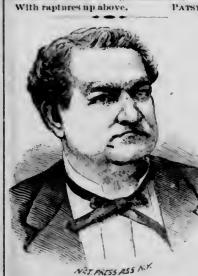

The duties that we owe-Our blessings to bestow. The year that's past was bright to some And scattered roses o'er the dead. But all have had their blessings given

Oh! who can tell when one more year Has passed in dusky gloom: Whose hearts will be forever stilled, And fill the allent lomb. It may be that our own weak hands That have done so little for God.

He sends the sunshine and the rain,

May be folded forever and ever The precious moments given; And lead our loving friends so dear By example up to Heaven. And scatter deeds of love;

And fill our hearls with gladness here.

Dr. Wintersmith,

Sir: I waive a rule I have observed for many years, the value of your remedy prompting me to say, in replyto your request, what I know of your Chill Cure. The private assurances of its efficacy I had, and the good results of its effects I had observed on Mr. R. W. Meredith, who, for more man attent years, has been foreman of my office, induced me to test it in my family. The results have been satirsly satisfactory. The first case was of two years' standing, in which I believe every known remedy had been tried with temporary relief—the chills returning periodically and seemingly with increased severity. Your cure broke them at once, and there has been no recurrence of them for more than six months. The other case was of a milder form, and yielded more readily to other remedies; but the chills would return at intervalantil your medicine was used, since which time, now several months, they have entirely disappeared. From the opportunity I have had to judge. I do not besitate to supress my belief that your Chill Cure is a valuable specific, and performs all you promise for it. Vary respectfully,
